Reference AG - as presently advised, reference AG discloses an invention relating to a delivering system in which a delivering person directly delivers a product to a customer and settles payment at a customer's place based on order data obtained when the customer ordered the product on the phone using his/her member number. Thus, reference AG discloses a system in which a customer loyalty reward scheme is provided for the delivering service that takes orders made by the telephone based on the member numbers.

Reference AH - as presently advised, reference AH discloses an invention providing a service which enables a customer to buy a product with personal information hidden when purchasing the product on the internet. A customer's personal information is registered at an internet online sales center and the customer buys a product from the internet online sales company using ID issued by the internet online sales center. That customer does not have to tell the internet online sales company his/her personal information such as his/her name and address. The internet online sales company entrusts delivering of the products to a distribution company. It can be assumed that the internet online sales company tells user's ID to the distribution company so that the distribution company can know the user's address from the internet online sales center.
